

FUNERAL CELEBRANCY
COURSE INFORMATION

THE COURSE

The nationally approved courses that are included in this training are:

CHCCEL008 Plan, present and evaluate funeral and memorial ceremonies

SIFXIND002 Work effectively in the funeral services industry

CHCCCS017 Provide loss and grief support

They are aimed at preparing a celebrant to design and perform a funeral ceremony with the needs of the client family in mind, and in a professional and respectful manner.

Whilst the funeral celebrant training is not designated by a government department as being compulsory to enter the profession of funeral celebrancy, there has been a growing trend over the last few years of Funeral Directors selecting graduates of this course.

The first two units of study are taken from the Cert IV in Funeral Services, and the third one from a Cert IV in either Community Services Work, Disability or Aged Care.

For people who may be studying or considering the Cert IV in Celebrancy these are three of the electives from that qualification. Australian Celebrations Training has also the Cert IV in Celebrancy qualification available.

The unit SIFFFNL005 Arrange Funerals is an extra elective that is stated in the Cert IV in Celebrancy. We have not included that unit of study in this course as it is not suitable for funeral celebrants. It is aimed at Funeral Directors arranging funerals (e.g. funeral arrangements, embalming, viewing, burial and cremation, coffin or casket arrangements).

FUNERALS IN AUSTRALIA

As reported by the Australian Bureau of Statistics approximately 70% of Australian funeral services are performed by civil funeral celebrants. Originally in Australia most people followed a Christian derived faith, however Australia is a country that has moved steadily towards non-religious and secular views on funerals. Many people still have spiritual views but have also moved away from church attendance.

As a result, there have been dynamic changes in funeral services. The outcome has been families' desire to move away from a church funeral to a celebrant service which places more emphasis on the unique personality and life of the deceased.

Over the last 5 to 10 years the death literacy movement has contributed highly to the normalizing of conversations around death. You may have heard of one of the following in your community:

End of Life consultants

End of Life planning

Groundswell Project

Death Doulas

Death Café

Death over Dinner

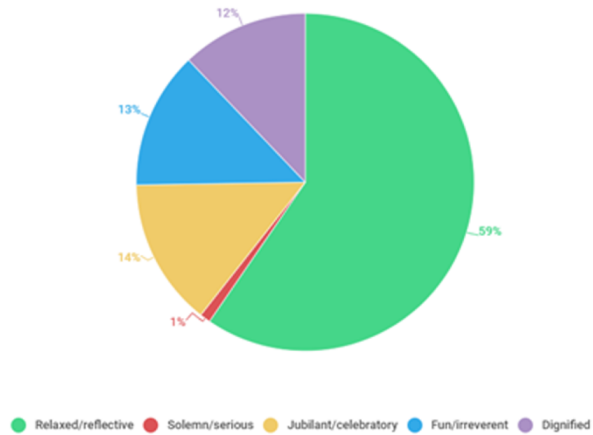

Certainly, the year 2020 has changed so much about the conversation about dying and planning and considering one's own death. And, how funerals are organized and celebrated. Here are just some of the trends:

FUNERAL TRENDS

- Green burials
- DIY funerals
- Cemeteries with QR codes and digital headstones
- Driverless hearse
- Eternal reefs in the oceans
- Cremation using fluids

As you can see from the following graph from www.finder.com.au that Australian's prefer a relaxed and highly personalized funeral service.

2044

In 2044 the population will be approximately 38.7 million and 20% of the population will be over 65, which makes 1 in 5 Australians 65+.

FUNERAL CELEBRANCY

This course has been written over a period of 17 years with experienced grief and bereavement counsellors, funeral directors, crematoria staff, and experienced funeral celebrants. The curriculum designers, funeral celebrants, funeral celebrant trainers, funeral directors and crematoria staff have extensive years of expertise in the field, some up to 25 years.

The skills and knowledge of company director, who designed the curriculum, Beth O'Brien, can be fully read over at her webpage <https://endoflifeplanning.com.au/beth-qualifications/>

Beth is a Certified Thanatologist, Grief and Bereavement Counsellor and Death Educator facilitator and has had extensive experience in the funeral celebrancy environment.

Australian Celebrations Training's Company Director, Beth O'Brien is an internationally certified funeral celebrant and brings expansive knowledge to this course, in very practical ways. Beth is the first Australian to receive this international certificate. In 2016 Beth completed her training as a Hospital Chaplain (Humanist) working mainly in the palliative care and infants' wards. Her work then evolved accompanying people who were terminally ill and supporting their family and friends in their home.

Included in the training team's expertise are also ceremonies such Mother's Day and Father's Day services, Christmas Services, Animal Companion Funerals, and Thanksgiving for Donation of bodies to medical faculties, memorial services for community grieving, Cancer Fund Relay for Life services. For more information on the diverse experience of our team you can read their profiles on our webpage at www.australiancelebrations.com.au

MODE OF LEARNING

Fully Online

The online course has you studying the 3 units of competency completely online. The modules are designed so that you can download them and print some if you wish. You will be required to film various assessment items; you therefore need access to that medium. Many people use their smart phone for this purpose. The course is self-paced to suit your business and personal life.

STUDENT MATERIAL AND ASSESSMENT

A word of advice

Working with families to design meaningful ceremonies is very rewarding. We have found over the years that some students of this course once they begin this career realise that they have some of their own personal un-resolved issues of grief. To be a successful funeral celebrant you would need to resolve those issues before continuing to be fair on yourself, your family, and your potential clients.

Student Resources

You will be required to purchase one e-book approximately $15. The student manual and resources have a variety of funeral ceremonies, and template documents that will support your role as a funeral celebrant.

ASSESSMENT

You will be required to video various assessment items; therefore, you will need to be able to have access to a video recorder or a smartphone.

ENROLMENT TIME FRAME

Enrolment in the online course is for 6 months.

On successful completion of all requirements students will be given a Statement of Attainment with the three nationally accredited units of competency.

ENTRY REQUIREMENTS

There are no formal entry requirements for this qualification. It would be assumed you have completed year 10 at school with sound literacy and numeracy skills. You should have good public speaking skills and be able to work with people empathetically.

WHEN CAN YOU START?

The online mode of study can be commenced at any time.
